ABOUT AIAA

The American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) comprises nearly 30,000 engineers and scientists from 88 countries dedicated to the global aerospace profession. AIAA convenes four yearly forums; publishes books, technical journals, and Aerospace America; hosts a collection of 160,000 technical papers; develops and maintains standards; honors and celebrates achievement; and advocates on policy issues. AIAA serves aerospace professionals around the world—who are shaping the future of aerospace—by providing the tools, insights, and collaborative exchanges to advance the state of the art in engineering and science for aviation, space, and defense. Visit aiaa.org, or follow us on Twitter @AIAA.

DESIGN/BUILD/FLY COMPETITION

11-14 APRIL 2019 | TUCSON, ARIZONA

The Design/Build/Fly Competition, in its 22nd year, invites student teams to design, fabricate, and demonstrate the flight capabilities of an unmanned, electric-powered, radio-controlled aircraft to meet a specified mission profile. The competition gives students the opportunity to validate and apply their studies in a challenging and fun environment. The organizing committee, which comprises representatives from the sponsoring organizations and the AIAA Aerodynamics, Aircraft Design, Design Engineering and Flight Test technical committees, selects a new topic each year to encourage innovation and maintain a fresh design. The 2019 challenge is to design a multi-purpose aircraft to support carrier operations.
